HARVEST HIGH YIELDS WHILE IMPROVING SOIL

High yields of cotton and corn can be made while improving the soil, according to J. C. Lower, API Extension Service Agronomist, Auburn.

On farms where it is desired to follow a two year rotation of cotton, vetch and corn, here is what happened in the Sand Mountain Sub-Station where the rotation was used.

For 18 years, well fertilized cotton averaged 1,782 pounds of seed cotton per acre. Vetch was planted in the cotton middles in the fall and fertilized with phosphate and potash. For the 18-year period, corn following the vetch averaged 51.8 bushels per acre.

Don't give up and buy a variety of seed that someone says is just as good as one recommended by the API Experiment Station, Auburn.

Since there are fewer cows on the farm now than in the past ten years, it is necessary to make sure that each milk cow is a good producer.

Boling a new rope closeline for a few minutes in lengthens its life.

Audacious Crow Upsets Whole City By Tricks

HARTFORD, WIS. — A single crow, known as "the black rook," with coy instincts and great audacity, had all Hartford confused.

First resident to take notice of the crow was Cleeny Smith, a milkman.

Returning to his truck, Cleeny heard the coins clink on the porch. He saw the crow drinking from the bottle.

"Gwan, beat it," cried Cleeny to the crow.

"I'm beat it," cried the crow to Cleeny.

The baffled milkman returned to the dairy. After the crow again attacked Cleeny, he took the milk, the crow found it. If the crow didn't find it, neither did the milkman.

Cleeny tried circling the truck off the route to elude the thirsty crow. But he failed the cagey bird perched on the porch railing when he got to the next stop on his milk route.

Owltired Bird

The only way Cleeny was able to get away from the crow was to carry a supply of cardboard cartons with him on the route. When the crow appeared, Cleeny covered his milk carton.

Roads in Hartford credited the crow with expensive and discriminating tastes. It is said that the crow demands cream. When the bird found a bottle of homogenized milk, it took the cap off, but left the contents untouched.

Bill Dunwiddie of the high school taught the crow to eat bacon and sausages, about the milk bottle trick. It was the windshiled wiper on his car.

The same crow stole the wiper blade at every opportunity and did his best to get it. Bill Dunwiddie had to climb a ladder to retrieve it.

His only solution was to hide the wiper blade. That still left the car without a windshield wiper.

Children at St. Kilian's parochial school reported another trick of the audacious crow. It flew after them when they were playing in the school yard.

And the crow snatched clothespins from washlines. The bird didn't wait until the town's women had t'ed and ironed laundry. It snatched around snatching pins as fast as they were put on—let the laundry fall where it may.

Six weeks later, Cleeny's bird had a new home on a handy fence railling, looking innocent with its steady eyes. But let the observer come close—off it was. Then it alighted a little further away and made sure the observer the cone-on again.

Total production of radio sets in 1948 was estimated at more than 16,000,000 sets. However, with many radio sets being sold in ever increasing larger sizes, their production capacity to television, output of radios was about 20 per cent below total production in 1947, which was the second highest in the history of the industry.

Corn alone will tend to produce pork with a thick layer of fat. Corn balanced with a protein supplement will tend to produce an excellent carcass with a greater proportion of lean meat.

activity or aspect of life, answer that's right. I have no interest in religion. Religion isn't a fenced-off pasture behind thick hedges.

Religion covers the whole farm, every bit of life from end to end. Jesus knew this very well. He never once tried to discuss anything on the ground that it was not religious.

He cast light on everything that touched him. He called his followers the "light of the world." Not flash lights, shining in narrow beam! Not fireflies, but stars set on a lampstand and "giving light to all who are in the house."

The Light Of God

A GOOD succession of Jesus' methods and ideas can be seen in Mark 10, which one chapter marks the burial of St. Peter, martyred in Rome, was buried in the vaults of the world's largest Christian church.

Archaeological findings "demonstrate that," the Pontiff said.

He had been expected to delay the disclosure until next year, opening next Holy Year, opening the vaults.

However, he had been expected to delay the disclosure until next year, opening next Holy Year, opening the vaults.

He made his statement about St. Peter's burial place quite early in the course of his address, whose topic was the ministry of Jesus which confronted Jesus. First there was a question about divorce. When they broached the subject, Jesus said, "It's not my business; that's only the orchard; it isn't the farm." Dr. Foreman

As Wide As Life

THEN THERE WAS a question about eternal life. Of course Jesus answered that one, it was obviously a religious question. "Explain it to us," asked the man in particular part of the farm, he would answer, "Jesus said, 'It's not my business; that's only the orchard; it isn't the farm.' He did not say, 'It's not my personal master in which he, as a teacher of religion, had no interest. He did not say it was strictly a matter for the religious themselves." Dr. Foreman

Religion And Little Children

THIS CHAPTER includes the famous story of the little children going to Jesus—evident that there was a question of ambition, the audacious request that James and John made strong remarks to make about that.

And finally at Jericho, not long before Palm Sunday, there was the blind beggar. But Jesus did not say to him, "Health is no affair of mine. I cure souls, not bodies."

The treasury would like to do something about it, but can't. That's nothing which would give it hold a public auction on the huge stacks of German marks from before World War I or Russia.

Secretary Helps

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder is as helpless as the next one. For one thing, he doesn't even know the combination to the safe. Mr. R. Julian, the treasurer of the United States, knows how the locks work, but he's not talking. Anyhow, to get back to buttons and trinkets:

In 1948, the state department sent a small boy over to the treasury under heavy guard with a large envelope along with a little note stating that the owner could not be located.

The treasury people opened the folder and found one pair of horn rimmed spectacles with gold mountings and a black one button; one collar button; one woman's handbag containing a pair of manicure scissors; one gold seal and a gold ring; and a Cuban coin worth about a million marks.

Articles Pile Up

And the collection goes on, such things pile up and gather dust in the dark, massive vaults.

The collection grows a long time and the stuff goes on file tells of a stack of bonds costing $100,000,000 in 1945 and turned over to the treasury for "safe keeping."

The letter says the bonds were given to the city of New Orleans, were to be held in trust for the city, but now have been turned over to the Shreveport office.

There are a lot of coins in the vaults. One is a gold medal which was supposed to have gone to a man who did a lot of heroic work during the war.

• • •

The stuff was turned over to the treasury as unclaimed by the state department. For safe keeping.

Men of all origins were living in foreign countries. When nobody showed up to claim it, it was given to the American diplomatic representatives. They shipped it to the
